Registering with RPSGB

You will benefit from our expertise & extensive experience at helping European Pharmacists register with the RPSGB. We provide you with comprehensive instructions, application forms and advice on the validation procedures required to register. We know exactly what is required and will advise and support you throughout the entire process.

For a European Pharmacist to practice as a pharmacist in the United Kingdom you must be registered with The Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain. The RPSGB is the organisation that governs all pharmacists who practice in the UK. The primary objectives of the RPSGB are to lead, regulate, develop and represent the profession of pharmacy.

You must have a pharmacy qualification obtained within the EEA to register as a pharmacist with the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain

Further information is available within our Pharmacy Resource Centre where you can download all the relevant application forms; you can call or email us for help too.

Your level of English

We have a multilingual team of consultants so you don't need to worry if your English isn't perfect when you first contact us. We have helped many European Pharmacists to improve their level of conversational English & Clinical English over a period of months.

Some of our clients require you to pass an English Language proficiency test before securing a job offer with them. With our help & your dedication by the time you meet with our clients your level of proficiency in English should be very good.

Locations

We provide help, support & advice about the UK to help you decide which region or city would be best for you. Pharmacy jobs in London for European Pharmacists are scarce, but we do have other larger town & city locations along with Pharmacy Jobs in more remote areas.
